

Another assassination attempt on Trump, so when will the Democrats realise that lying hate attacks and malicious prosecutions, motivated by political failures, is endangering life, not just democracy?

FBI names Ryan Wesley Routh as 'apparent Trump assassination attempt' suspect after Trump highlights the failure of Democrats to deter or end the Israel-Gaza war and the Ukraine-Russia war.

NIGE COOK
SEP 15, 2024

Above: Haris may not have paid this guy in dollar bills, but she and her type motivated him.

I don't like Trump, I don't like Farage, I don't like politicians who are overpaid. But there is sadly such a thing as the "lesser of two evils", there is such a thing as "democracy", there is such a thing as "fair play", there is such a thing as "human decency". Though, maybe not with Democrats, anymore. I've gone into the politics of lying science at my site <http://nukegate.org/> which includes suppressed videos of Trump warning of the nuclear war threat ignored by his presidential debate rival, Haris. The BBC totally ignored Trump's clear warning, pretending it never happened, even though today its star BBC News anchor, Huw Edwards, is due to be sentenced to prison for child pornography! Such gutter journalism always costs lives. But how many murders are they responsible for? Basically, nuclear deterrence using tactical nuclear weapons to deter the invasions that set off both World Wars, i.e. the invasion of Belgium in 1914 by concentrated force and of Poland in 1939 by concentrated force (from the East by Russia and from the West by Germany), could have prevented many millions of deaths since 1945, but evil folk prevented this, wanting war to continue. End of story.

<https://www.independent.co.uk/news/uk/politics/putin-starmer-biden-ukraine-missiles-b2613162.html>:

News analysis: Starmer wants us to believe that he is the prime minister who 'will make the tough decisions' but his trip to Washington DC proved that he finds this much easier in regards to Britain's pensioners than dealing with Putin

David Maddox

Political editor (independent newspaper)

"The lesson of the excursion was perhaps that it is far easier to make "tough choices" regarding thousands of Britain's pensioners potentially dying in a cold winter than it is to sort out a rabid dictator Vladimir Putin threatening to use nukes."

"Both Downing Street and the Foreign Office (FCDO) staff at the embassy did their best to play down the significance of the trip. But - despite their denials - this meeting of an outgoing lame-duck US president and the recently elected prime minister was mostly about one major issue: whether to allow Ukraine to use long-range Storm Shadow missiles against targets in Russia.

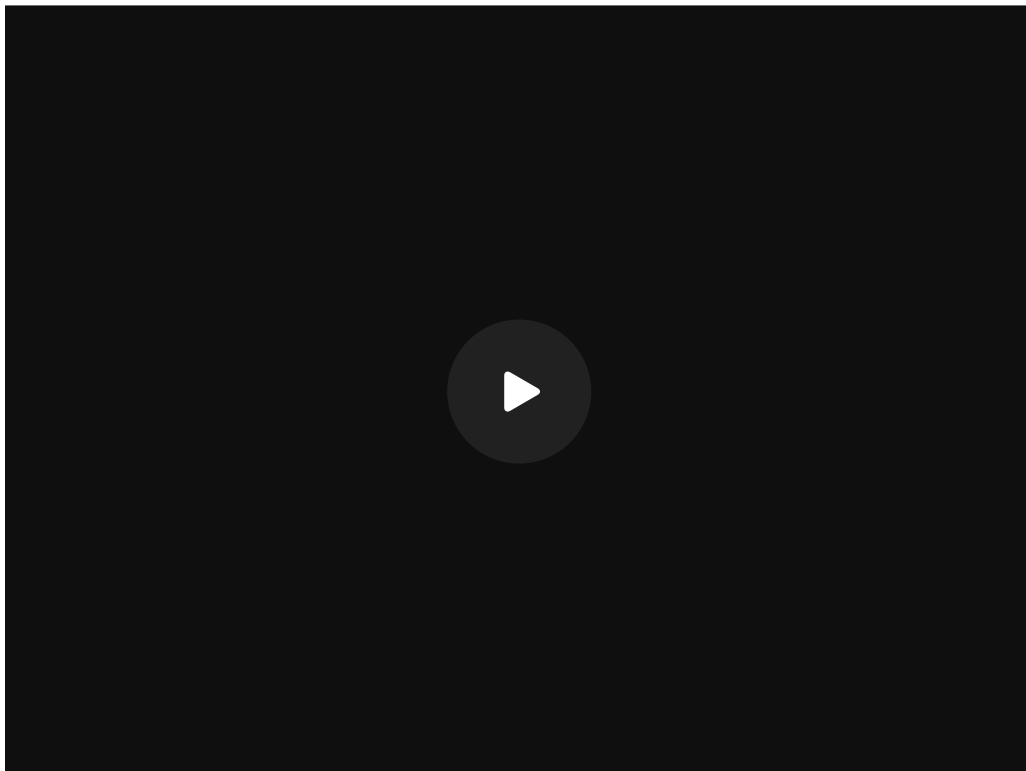

"The decision to allow it was supposed to be made but not announced. Instead, it was delayed for further discussions at the United Nations General Assembly in New York.

"How do we know this to be true? Well, just days before that US secretary of state Antony Blinken and foreign secretary David Lammy held a joint press conference in the Foreign Office and basically said so. They revealed the help Iran was giving to Russia and told journalists that they were going to Kyiv together to listen to Ukraine president Volodymyr Zelensky and others make the case for using storm shadow missiles on Russia territory. They then said that these talks would feed into the discussions with Starmer and Biden on Friday, which Lammy also attended.

“All this happened and it was clear to most observers with an ounce of experience that this was a carefully choreographed series of events heading to a “tough decision” which would not only change the course of the war but ensure that Donald Trump, if he is elected, would struggle to reverse Nato support for Ukraine.

“The trouble may have been that it was too obvious. Even as the prime minister’s plane took off to Washington Putin was planning his next move to try to stop the decision from being made. Minutes before Sir Keir was due to have an on the record session with the lobby journalists travelling with him the news broke that Putin had warned use of the missiles in Russia would mean his country would be “at war with Nato”. ... he then spent much of the session defending his decision to take winter fuel allowance from pensioners and denying Labour’s own research that it would kill 4,000 people. He may be gloomy but at least he can make the “tough decisions”.”

Discussion about this post

Comments

Restacks

Write a comment...

© 2024 Nige Cook · Privacy · Terms · Collection notice
Substack is the home for great culture